Here is a simple strategy for governmental change.

Party A is the governing party.

Party B is the party allied with Party A.

Party C is the party which opposes both parties.

The People cause an event which removes Party A.

Party B separates from party A. This is because Party A no longer exists and Party B wants to survive.

Party B and Party C are now in opposition and have a general election.

Party C wins because, of course, Party B was allied with Party A.
